Claims 1-52 meet the criteria set out in PCT Article 33(2)-(4) because the prior art does not teach or fairly suggest an optical filter having a passband of less than 1 nm and including a plurality of cavities with at least one spacer of thickness greater than 7 microns, the spacer defining two opposed surfaces each having a plurality of thin layers disposed thereon, wherein the total number of thin layers per cavity is less than 35 and wherein the maximum allowable uniformity error in the thickness of each thin layer is within the range of 1 part in 50,000 to 3 parts in 1000. The prior art documents listed in the International Search Report disclose the optical filters having the passbands much larger than 1 nm and more relaxed tolerances on the uniformity of each thin layer thickness.

The invention has industrial applicability in optical filter devices.
